

A Monday nightmare

George Spiliotopoulos' Santa Rita ordeal

By WALT HECOX
The following story is taken from the words and thoughts of George Spiliotopoulos and in no way represents an attitude or opinion of The Times. It is a moving story and one of great social significance which The Times believes should be told. Reports of "little guys" suffering indignities at Santa Rita have been frequent but often unsubstantiated. This is the story of one man, a citizen, businessman and public servant of good reputation. If what he says is true, and it happened to him, it could happen to anyone.

An angry, battered and slightly bewildered George Spiliotopoulos yesterday told his personal horror story to The Times, an ordeal which began at the institution known as the Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center at 11:39 p.m. Monday and ended in the small hours of the morning at Valley Memorial Hospital.

"Everything which has been written or said about conditions at Santa Rita is true," he declared "I have read about these things and never believed them. Now I know they are true."

While Deputy District Attorney Harold Murphy was reluctant to press charges of resisting arrest against the Alameda County Planning Commissioner, former Pleasanton City Councilman and owner of the famed Cheese Factory, Spiliotopoulos, coldly angry and convinced he must act to right conditions he considers horribly wrong, was insisting as of yesterday morning the legal process which started Monday night be carried to its conclusion in court.

"It doesn't matter what kind of a physical plant exists at Santa Rita. As long as some of the people whom I encountered Monday are there it will be wrong. The place could be located at a country club and it still would be an atrocity."

Spiliotopoulos made it clear that he had in no way turned away from "The Establishment" by his ordeal and that he is not head hunting. "I am a part of the establishment and believe in it," he said.

"When I find something wrong within the establishment I intend to do everything I can to correct it within that framework." The Spiliotopoulos story started routinely enough Monday with the regular meeting of the planning commission at the Public Works Building in Hayward.

From there George went to visit a friend in his office and, after some time passed, went with him to a cocktail lounge where they met several other friends and engaged in a complicated game of liar's dice.

George carefully pointed out that the game, involving 30 dice and six players, takes a long time to complete and that although he may have been in the bar for a couple of hours, only a few drinks were involved.

"I don't like to drink that well anyway," he observed. "I like the camaraderie and good fellowship in bars, but I might win three drinks and pass two, playing just for the fun of competition." Later events that evening served to substantiate the truth of that statement. Spiliotopoulos started home along Grove Way and noticed a Highway Patrolman across the street as he turned to Castro Valley Boulevard and the Interstate 580 on ramp.

His car, a restored Model A Ford pickup with a 327 Chevrolet engine and Mustang differential, fishtailed slightly as he turned into the ramp.

"The steering is a little hard and with all that power I may have turned a little too fast on the ramp," he explained.

The red light of a patrol car appeared behind when he was three-quarters of the way up the ramp and his first thought was that the vehicle behind him was an ambulance.

He pulled over to the shoulder and stopped and then realized the car behind belonged to the Highway patrol.

A young, and in George's opinion very angry patrolman ordered him from the pickup,

Sierra Club petition denied

Apperson Ranch proposal overcomes last hurdle

Alameda County Bureau OAKLAND - The last hurdle blocking William Apperson from constructing his

Diamond A Guest Ranch was cleared Thursday when Alameda County Superior Court Judge Lyle Cook denied the Sierra Club's petition for writ of mandate.

The Sierra Club and a consortium of other environmental groups had attempted to block that guest ranch, which would be located on Apperson Ridge near Sunol Regional Park, because of its impact on the environment.

In his ruling Thursday, however, Judge Cook stated: "The Alameda County Board of Supervisors did not exceed its jurisdiction in granting Apperson a use permit."

Apperson's proposal "conforms to the limitations relating to uncultivated agricultural and land preserve uses and to the Open Space Element of the county's General Plan."

The board of supervisors did not "abuse its discretion by failing to give proper weight to the Environmental Impact Report."

"On the contrary," Judge Cook stated, "there is substantial evidence in the record to indicate the board responded to this report (the EIR) in making its decision."

The judge's ruling ends the seven-month court case and ends a nearly two and one-half year struggle by Apperson, a long-time Pleasanton rancher, to build the recreational facility on his 2,500-acre ranch.

The Sierra Club does have the right of appeal but its attorney, Owen O'Donnell was not available for comment on the decision.

Apperson's plans call for construction of the guest ranch, health spa and tennis and equestrian center on 145 acres of his ranch.

The Sierra Club had launched a two-pronged attack to block Apperson from building the guest ranch — both in Superior Court and before the State Water Resources Control Board.

That board's San Francisco Bay Regional arm had established discharge requirements for the guest ranch's private sewage disposal plant in mid-1974.

The Sierra Club appealed that decision to the SWRCB, however, which instructed the regional board to review those discharge standards.

In May of this year, the Regional Water Quality Control Board reaffirmed its decision, thus clearing that hurdle for Apperson.

Apperson was understandably pleased with the judge's ruling and said he hoped to begin construction on the facility this fall. He admitted he "had been tremendously hampered by this delay" and added the start of construction will be dependent on the "re-gearing up of our staff."

TEEN RECORD SETTERS: Exactly one year ago Pleasanton teenagers Karie Theis and Jamie Pappas used the basketball pictured to set a record for continuous bouncing, one that even the Guinness Sports Record Book was astounded by....300 hours! The girls' decision to do it, and their persistence at accomplishing the task they set for themselves, is perhaps reflective of a majority of teenagers today. Teenagers are the focus of an editorial page column by Al Fischer today on Page 6.

Conditions placed on Burr plans

Alameda County Bureau The Alameda County Planning Department has recommended 22 conditions be placed on Edwin Burr's proposed development along Sunol ridge if the planning commission decides to approve the project.

The staff analysis of the controversial development will be presented to the commission at their 1:30 p.m. Monday meeting in Hayward at the County Public Works Building.

Burr wants to build eight homes — each on a 100 acre lot — along Sunol Ridge parallel to Kilkare Canyon Road and devote 655 acres to open space. The main objection to the project is the steep and dangerous access road that will have to be built to allow residents to get to their homes.

The road has one stretch with a 23 per cent grade (Santos Ranch Road has a 20 per cent grade at some points) and much of it exceeds 18 per cent.

To keep unauthorized people off the dangerous road, the planning staff suggests that a vehicle control gate should be built and a sign should be next to it stating that the road is dangerous, has steep grades, sharp turns and that extreme caution is necessary.

The planning staff also recommended that:

- Any relocation of public facilities and improvements should be done by the developer;

- Water and sewage treatment plans be approved by the Alameda County Health Officer;

- A Homes Association should be formed from the homeowners to maintain the access road, the security gate, the signs and cut and fill landscaping; and

- Any grading or land moving done to build the access road should be covered with natural plant materials if possible.

Burr is before the commission because Planning

Contract expires

PLEASANTON - As of midnight last night, the 24 members of the Pleasanton Firefighters Local 1974 were operating without a contract with the city. Negotiations for a new contract for the 1975-76 fiscal year are continuing, however.

Director Bill Fraley denied his original request to develop the 1,520 acre parcel. Burr appealed and was heard June 30 of this year.

Although no action was taken, it seemed the commissioners, headed by George Spiliotopoulos, would rule in favor of the development July 21.

However, the planning staff discovered that under a new state law that a public hearing had to be held, so the hearing was scheduled for August 4, and action can be taken at that time.

PESD planning to hire music department chief

PLEASANTON - The music program for K-5 schools in Pleasanton will be revised for 1975-76, reflecting not only the overall financial pinch but better utilization of personnel.

Superintendent Bruce Newlin told Pleasanton Elementary School District board members at a budget session Wednesday the program would be coordinated under one person. That person would probably be a new hire. During the past school year, a music instructor at Pleasanton Elementary took care of that school's instrumental program and assisted the music program at Alisal for a couple hours each week. Ray Baptista served as an instructor of music at the junior high level while Barbara Winter was listed as a sixth grade and chorus teacher.

Ray Gerloff and Alberta Hill were music instructors at Harvest Park in 74-75. Valley View, Vintage Hills, Fairlands and Walnut Grove relied on regular classroom teachers for vocal and instrumental music.

The revised program will result in a reduction of two-fifths (equivalent) of a teacher.

Director of Fiscal Services

Doug Rose told board members, before launching into the lengthy publication budget review, the beginning balance is $14,400 higher than what the budget showed.

In an earlier executive session involving both the Pleasanton and Amador school boards, trustees learned the undistributed reserve amount of $133,000 would have to cover any raises granted to administrative personnel. Thhs includes from Newlin on down to vice principals.

The executive session was adjourned and no announcement made in public session as to the percentage of pay raises for administrators. The announcement is expected to be made at public hearings on the budget set for next Tuesday (Amador board at Dublin High) and Wednesday (Pleasanton board at District Educational Center).

Early discussion in the budget session became ruffled over what Trustee Karen Finn felt were widely-varying costs for such utility services as garbage pickup, water and sewer at district schools. Mrs. Finn cited the wide variation in cost for garbage pickup at Alisal and Fairlands.

Trustee Betty Nostrand also questioned the costs as well as laundry services for custodial employees.

When board member Joe Schwab, who was agitated by the trend of the discussion, suggested a report on methods used in regards utility services, the review moved on at a quicker pace. Trustees completed their budget review with nary a person in the audience.

The Pleasanton budget totals $6,300,694 with $2,734,438 coming from state basic and equalization aid. Local income amounts to $2,727,443. Chief expenditure, as always, is the amount ($3,379,852) for teachers' salaries.

The Amador Valley budget totals $7,985,251 with $2,292,812 coming from the state and $1,660,770 from local sources.

Teachers' salaries will take $3,523,147.

A profile of the man

Frank Ivaldi - the man who built Sunol Golf Course

By WALT HECOX

This is the fourth story about Frank Ivaldi, the man behind the building of Sunol Golf Course and a central figure in the controversy which has raged the last year and a half.

Sam Snead was just beginning a professional golf career and Frank Ivaldi was starting out in the construction business the first of only two Alameda County Open tournaments was held at the Sequoia Country Club Course.

Snead had probably only recently earned that first nickel he reportedly still possesses and Ivaldi did not have the price of a ticket to the tournament.

Sam fared pretty well at the tournament, probably better than Frank, taking home first prize money, one of 81 tournaments he has won to date.

Ivaldi hopped over the fence and watched Snead and a host of much bigger names at the time play their four rounds. That wasn't first prize money but Frank considered it a pretty good bonus in those days when even a nickel was hard to find.

To some it seemed only fitting that 30 years later the second Alameda County Open tournament was played at the Sunol Valley Golf Course.

Snead was missing and Frank's admission fee, together with his partners, was between two and two and a half million dollars.

The Ivaldi interest in golf began early. Like many young men in his era, Frank was introduced to the game while working as a caddie at the old Oak Knoll course, a site later replaced by a United States Naval Hospital.

While working in the theatres nights as a janitor, Frank, when not moonlighting in the daylight hours, had some time for golf.

He played at the Chabot Golf Course where green fees were 50 cents for nine holes, a dollar for 18.

Golf was not exactly his life, but Frank has always been a better than average player and enjoyed the game.

When he went looking for gravel land in the Sunol Valley and was told by John Brucato, then land manager for San Francisco city and county that a pair of people were interested in building a golf course on the land surrounding and adjoining Andrade Road, his imagination was captured.

Brucato introduced him to Clark Glasson and another man who faded out of the picture soon and whose name Ivaldi cannot remember.

Glasson, a golf course architect, outlined his plans and Frank was enthusiastic.

During the 22 months in which it took to construct the Glasson inspired course a lot of changes took place.

Originally Frank and Glasson had planned to have a housing development constructed around the perimeter of the course. A large motel was planned as were a variety of other recreational activities.

At the outset the layout promised to be a recreation minded family's dream.

"The original contract with the city called for an expenditure of not less than $500,000 in improvements by the lessee," Ivaldi recalled. "For that amount I could have constructed the two golf courses plus a small coffee shop, pro shop and perhaps a bar and been solvent."

Frank was not interested in the small operation. Instead of the $500,000, he spent more than two million on the courses and a massive showplace club house with banquet rooms and auditorium space large enough for a convention.

Then one by one his peripheral projects were shot down by the San Francisco Water Department or Public Utilities Commission, three money crunches followed on the heels of each other and the big club house with its two courses, one lighted for night play, was forced to stand on its own.

Perhaps, with Ivaldi's firm hand on the reins from the start, they could have succeeded. But some strange things happened during the next half dozen years.

Tomorrow a parade of managers.

another patrol car with two officers joined them and Spiliotopoulos was given a field sobriety test which he passed with flying colors.

While he reported he smiled broadly, elated because he had passed the test easily, when the young officer looked at the others and said, "Book him." At this point George is of the opinion the other three officers, all older men, registered surprise while he was utterly amazed.

Whatever the case, the younger man was in charge and George was arrested, charged with reckless driving and his hands were cuffed behind his back.

The arresting officer left and while George waited with the other two for a tow truck to come and pick up his truck he struck up a friendly conversation with them, discovered they had several mutual friends and eventually convinced them they could safely relieve his discomfort by transferring the handcuffs from the rear to the front.

An hour and 14 minutes passed before Spiliotopoulos arrived at Santa Rita and by that time, according to Spiliotopoulos, the three men had formed such a friendly acquaintance that George shook their hands and the trio assured each other they would meet again under happier circumstances.

Spiliotopoulos was ushered to the booking desk of the jail and taken to a small, open doored holding room where part of the booking operation took place.

At that time he noticed a young black man sitting nearby, hands cupped over his mouth and shivering violently.

When the preliminary booking process was completed George was placed with the young black man in an area known as "the bull pen" it was then that he noticed what the young black man had in his hands was a paper towel, folded many times, which he was biting.

"This man needs medical attention," he told the booking officer.

"I know and its on the way," was the reply.

By that time the young man was trembling much more violently and his fellow prisoners were demanding help for the "brother", sometimes adding what they considered appropriate obscenities to their pleas and demands.

The young man, naked to the waist and wearing a pair of jail trousers, was obviously in acute distress at that time and when a deputy passed by the bull pen lighting cigarettes for the prisoners,

George said in a firm tone, "This man needs help." The deputy's answer was, "Shut your (expletive deleted) mouth and move back." George then replied in a very firm tone, "This man needs medical attention and he needs it now!"

What followed Spiliotopoulos still cannot completely believe.

He reports within seconds the deputy was in the cell, had fastened his arm behind him in a hammerlock and whirled him out of the cell.

"I can't find words to tell you how fast it happened," he said. "It was all a matter of seconds, or split seconds."

George was jerked from the bull pen and slammed, face first, against the screen of a booking room.

Spiliotopoulos reported that immediately he was surrounded by deputies, spreadeagled against a wall and his head beaten repeatedly against the wall.

Life had suddenly become a foggy nightmare for George Spiliotopoulos. He knew there were deputies on either side of him, deputies behind him. His arms were spread wide with deputies holding them. His feet wide apart to the point where he thought he might split in half. Doors clanged, keys rattled and he wondered if he was going to live through the night.

He was pulled and thrust into a solid concrete cell with no openings, shoved into a corner and turned to face a deputy whose hands were raised in a fighting "Take off your shoes," the deputy ordered.

"By then I was convinced if I made one false move I would get a fist in the stomach or somewhere else. I unzipped my boots and handed them to the deputy one at a time," he recalled.

The next order was to remove a belt but Spiliotopoulos was not wearing one.

The door shut and George slid down the wall to a sitting position on the concrete floor between a pair of patches stained by urine.

"I was trying to relate to what I had said which created the incident," he remembered. "It was then I felt something warm running down my face."

The warm stuff was blood pouring across his face and down to his clothes. He looked at it, warm, red and sticky on his hands and the fear flowed with it. At that time he wondered how long he was going to live.

An interval passed, George does not remember how long. Time was endless by then.

Eventually a Sergeant opened the door and entered that solitary cubicle accompanied by a huge man who, by George's most kindly description, was highly unattractive.

The Sergeant wanted to know if Spiliotopoulos wanted medical assistance.

"I don't want either one of you to touch me," George replied.

"You are refusing medical assistance? Why did you resist the deputy when he told you to leave the cell," the reported Sergeant inquired.

"You're a liar and your deputy is a liar," Spiliotopoulos replied. "I don't want either one of you to touch me. I WANT people to see me like this. All I want to do now is talk to my attorney."

George went on from there. Up to that point he declared he had made no attempt to indicate he had money or an influential position in Alameda County. He had, until then, been totally sober and in control of his mind and emotions.

Panic took over. He asked for Tom Houchins, called him Hutchins and found himself in an exchange over the Sheriff's name. He called for a variety of other friends who worked in the department.

Once again he was offered medical aid and refused and the door slammed shut. Spiliotopoulos was alone, his mind racing through an emotional kaleidoscope, fear, anguish, humiliation, bewilderment.

This can't be happening, he thought. I've heard about this, read about it, but never believed it. Now I know it is true. But it can't be true. I haven't done anything to deserve any of this. Nothing. Not uttered a cross word.

George does not know how many endless moments passed. All he recalls is that time seemed to stand still while he sat in that blank-walled cell and tried to fit those moments into the scheme of his life.

Eventually the cell door opened. Mike Hart stood there, the spitting image of Tom Hart, once one of George's teachers and eventually assistant superintendent of schools and a close friend.

George, reported, for a moment, he believed it was Tom Hart and it was then he broke down, sobbing uncontrollably, crying in a manner he had never believed possible.

"What are you doing here, George?" Mike asked.

George's mind returned to proper perspective. He was led, after considerable urging, from the cell by Hart and taken to the booking room where the process was finished. Hart found Attorney John Corley's telephone number and called him at home.

George was returned to the bull pen where he was greeted by his fellow prisoners as a hero.

Corley took about 15 minutes to make it to the prison. It took about two hours of red tape to free George.

A young prisoner was freed with him and expressed fear that if he tried to hitch hike he would be arrested again.

Corley and George took him to the Motel 6 on Hopyard road, George gave him money to spend the night there.

Spiliotopoulos was taken to Valley Memorial Hospital, his wounds cleaned and treated and he was given a tetanus shot.

At last he was free. But the memory lived with him. He wondered what happened in Greystone, the institution's maximum security wing, if he could be treated as he was in the relatively public booking area.

He wondered what happened to young men without friends or money who could not call for an attorney, could not get help of any kind.

He wondered how many borderline cases were turned to felons by such treatment.

He doesn't know the answer to any of those questions. But he intends to find those answers. And to do something to relieve the situation.

Services for seniors at Pleasanton clinic

LIVERMORE - Let's not forget who started the Pleasanton Health Care Center: the senior citizens!

That's the message Lillian Snorf, senior citizens' leader on many fronts, has for the public in a news release.

"The time has come for the public to be informed about the Pleasanton Health Care Clinic," Mrs. Snorf begins. Among her activities is directorship of services to seniors under the sponsorship of the Livermore Area Recreation and Park District, and membership on the Pleasanton clinic's board.

"Over three years ago," says Mrs. Snorf, "a group of us decided the community needed a clinic to attend to the many health needs of the Valley. There is not now nor was there then transportation to the county's Fairmont or Highland Hospitals and clinics."

"The clinic went through growing pains and some unfavorable publicity. Our board was made up of neophytes but our dream did not die.

"We now have a spic-and-span building, competent and courteous personnel. The fees are on a sliding scale. The maximum amount is $8."

"The county has furnished us a bus that will pick up persons, take them to the clinic and return them to their homes."

"If enough people make use of the clinic and the bus, we can have another doctor. But if the bus is not used enough, the county will discontinue its use in September," she warns.

"The young bus driver is a skilled driver and will help people get on and off if they need this service. Their service extends to Springtown (northern Livermore)."

"For seniors we have a list of clinic days and information on how to reserve the bus. Our office wants to alert seniors to the fact that on Friday afternoons, they can have free blood pressure tests and diabetic combitests at the clinic.

"We will set up appointments and reserve the bus. Our phone number is 443-1150. Office hours (of the Senior Service Center) are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. We are located in the Recreation Center, 2466 Eighth Street (at 'H'), Livermore."

"Salting away" expansion money?

Miller blasts VMH rate hikes

LIVERMORE - Councilman Don Miller labeled as "irresponsible" Valley Memorial Hospital's (VMH) rate hikes to help finance its proposed Pleasanton medical center.

Miller, who has been opposed all along to the hospital's plans for a new facility at W. Las Positas and Santa Rita Road, said "The public ought to know money is being taken out of their hides for a move that does not make fiscal or business sense."

assured VMH would not raise its fees in order to expand.

As a result, the council decided to send Tirsell and Councilman Dale Turner as its representatives to the Alameda County and Contra Costa County Comprehensive Health Group to protest the hospital's action.

Miller explained he supported VMH's motive for expansion to Pleasanton - private "rip-off" hospitals might move into the area - but thought the hospital should make efforts at the Comprehensive Health Group level to prevent such operations from settling in the area.

"VMH is salting away money at the patients' expense for an irresponsible expansion," said Miller and added the public was being "shafted" by the hospital board.

The health department believes immunizations are best secured from one's own physician who is familiar with the patient's health status and who keeps permanent records of all services. The county does not keep records and recommends that these be kept by individuals using county services.

Vaccinations offered

SAN RAMON - A Contra Costa County Health Department immunization clinic will be held Thursday, Aug. 7, 3-6 p.m. in the Family Health Center, 9260 Alcosta Blvd.

Immunization will be offered against polio, diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and measles. German measles vaccine will also be available for those 1 to 12 years old. Smallpox vaccination, though no longer routinely recommended, will be on hand for those planning a trip to infected parts of the world.

Two die in accidents

LIVERMORE - Two valley residents were killed in separate auto accidents this week.

William Victorine, 69, died Sunday when his Jeep overturned on Highland Road and pinned him under the wreckage.

A Veterans Administration Hospital nurse, Relva Tefteller, 56, was pronounced dead on arrival at Valley Memorial Hospital following an accident on First Street.

Victorine was reported dead by ambulance and police crews who arrived shortly after the 2:30 p.m. accident.

Police say Tefteller crossed the dividing line at the intersection of First Street and Las Positas Boulevard and struck a pickup truck head on.

The driver of the truck, Steven Smith, 26, and his wife, Joyce 23, and daughter Sandra, 3, all of Livermore, were treated at VMH for cuts and bruises and later released.

The cause of Tefteller's accident is under investigation.

Crash kills LLL fireman

LIVERMORE - A 43-year-old Lawrence Livermore Laboratory fireman was killed earlier this week in a Utah auto accident.

Li. Ted Barth, of LLL's Site 300 chemical explosion test facility, was killed while on vacation.

An employee of the Lab for nearly 10 years, Barth lived in Livermore.

No other details were reported in the mishap. Funeral arrangements are pending.

Harry's Corner

Thanks to all of you who took time to give me a call to share your ideas regarding this "corner" in the Valley Times and tell me what you'd like to read in it. No only have adults approached me, but also youngsters I've known through the years who tugged my arm with the comment, "My Mommy and Daddy saw you in the paper!"

Someone remarked to me the other day on the abundance of lovely bicycling roads, or paths, if you will, that are available to us in this area. By coincidence, cycling is one of my favorite leisure activities, and I particularly enjoy an early morning ride. By early I mean roll down the driveway about six a.m. and return about seven.

My preferred route is to take San Ramon Valley Road from Dublin to Danville. The few upgrades are gentle enough so that you don't feel like a working Trojan pedaling up them, and the countryside is more than pleasant to look at. Traffic at that early hour, I find, is of no real concern because most commuters are whizzing along on highway 680.

Something else you'll enjoy if you venture out at this time in the morning is the weather - it's cool, pleasant, fresh, and the wind is usually of no significance. Great sensations to store up against the heat of the coming day.

One morning on the way back from Danville I decided to cut across to Tassajara Road and return that way to Dublin. Twice I pulled over to the side of the road to catch a momentary breather. Each time a driver stopped his car and inquired if everything was O.K. You know, it's about twice as pleasant as a morning breeze to have people show in a positive way how concerned and great they are.

What do you see when you're on your bikes or your boats or your skateboards? Give me a call, or drop a note to my "corner" at Woodren Realty and we'll tell the world.

Bellinger trys comeback in Publinx

NED BELLINGER

It used to be you didn't worry about the club championship at Livermore's Las Positas Golf Course. You just went out and asked the man to inscribe Ned Bellinger's name on the trophy for the umpteenth time, then returned to witness the battle in the blind bogey flight.

Everyone conceded that Bellinger was the region's best. You had to go as far south as Pebble Beach to find suitable opposition for him.

Then somehow last summer, things began to sour. It was actually an imperceptible slump for Ned as he still scoring in the mid-70's and winning his share of $2 Nasas.

But he was folding in big competitions. There was a chink somewhere in his swing and he couldn't locate it.

Bellinger pin points the date of his demise as the morning last July he attempted to qualify for the Northern California Public Links championship. Bellinger had been in the tournament four consecutive years. He finished fourth three years ago.

But this day he shot an 84, 12-over par, and failed to qualify.

Since then he has lost the club championship to young Vic Wolfe, and perhaps some of the confidence that made him good.

This week Bellinger marks the first anniversary of his Public Links collapse, returning to the big tournament at Spyglass Hill. Perhaps he'll celebrate by taking divots with an eight-iron on the 17-Mile Drive. Or, more likely, he may regain the form to be a challenger in this difficult championship.

Bellinger qualified for the Publinx with a four-over 76 two weeks back at Las Positas. Also earning a tournament berth that day was Wolfe, the former Chabot College student who is playing some of the best golf of his life.

They will be part of a 134-man field teeing off Saturday morning in the two-day, 36-hole tournament. Defending champion Jeff Burda of Aptos, a Notre Dame graduate, will be back for a second title try.

Also on hand will be Bob Blomberg, runner-up last month in the California State Amateur championship.

Another challenger will be Danville's Jim McMurtrey, who competed recently at the United States Public Links tournament in Hawaii.

Wolfe could be ready to challenge off his play in recent months. Vic finished second in the state junior college championship in June. Later that same month he nearly qualified for the championship flight in the Cal State Am, losing in a playoff for the final spot. That tournament was played at Spyglass Hill so he is attuned to the course.

So is Bellinger, who can't count the number of Northern California Golf Association tournaments he has played there. He rates it no lower than the second best in the state. "It's great," Ned says. "I love it, but it's very difficult."

"And," he adds, "the way

I've been playing, I wouldn't give myself much of a chance."

"I've been playing badly," Bellinger said yesterday. "I just can't get the ball in the hole."

"But I'm starting to putt well and I'm close to playing good. Maybe I'll get it back this weekend."

Bellinger, who has won the Las Positas club championship five times, shot a disastrous, 81.79 at Harding Park June 14-15 in failing to qualify for the U.S. Public Links.

His 76 at Las Positas two weeks ago was encouraging in the face of stiff breezes and a year-old slump.

If he can cure new-found illnesses on the tee, Bellinger says his stock will go way up at Spyglass.

And the men's club trophy at Las Positas may go into permanent retirement.

Among the entrants in the Spyglass Hill flight of the Publinx (handicaps 11 and up) are Don Perkins of Sunol, and John Schatz and Richard Holman of Las Positas.

New gymnastic form's got rhythm

Constant expansion has been the way of American sport for at least a decade. But, despite the proliferation of athletics, few innovations have appeared: just more of the familiar activities.

The Diablo Gymnastics Club of Walnut Creek, however, does have something new on the horizon. By fall the club hopes to have a team competing in modern rhythmic gymnastics, now a primarily European sport.

Encompassing five dance-oriented events using hoops, ribbons, ropes and clubs as props, rhythmic gymnastics requires different skills than traditional thereby opening the range of activity and opening up the sport to more competitors. "It's a whole unexplored field," said Diablo coach Jim Gault. "It's like the difference between competitive synchronized swimming."

"Rhythmic has a lot to offer girls who are graceful and lithe but who lack the strength or inclination for artistic (the more familiar bars, horses and balance beam)," he added.

"Some girls struggle for years. This way we could channel them into something they might be successful in right away."

The grass-roots spark for the rhythmic program at the Diablo club came from 15-year old Kahea Bright of Mill Valley.

Bright, who now lives with the family of Diablo's world class competitor Diane Dunbar, accompanied Gault and several teammates to the Spokane World's Fair last summer where they worked out with the Russian national team and world champion Galena Shegelakova.

While Gault termed the Russian's abilities "fantastic", Kahea sees rhythmic as a good route to comeback from a year-long illness. Bright, who won a regional floor exercise event two years ago, found that the lay-off had taken some of the edge off her performance. Now, along with teammate and neighbor Karen Smith, Kahea forms a small but eager nucleus of Diablo's hoped-for rhythmic team.

"I've only goofed around with rhythmic," she said, "but I'd really like to try it." Ironically, it was only because of a happy accident that Bright was still with the club to come up with the revolutionary suggestion.

"It was getting to be too long of a commute (an hour each way from Mill Valley), so two years ago I was ready to quit. But when I called to tell the coach, Mr. Dunbar was there and offered to put me up," she said.

"I hadn't met Diane or her parents, but it's really worked out well. I'll probably stay in Pleasanton till I finish high school," said Kahea, who attends Foothill High.

While she's "not too sure" about any long range goals, Kahea, like many young athletes has the Olympics in the back of her mind.

For the moment, she's appearing Diablo's annual showcase, the "Flip-Flop Follies", which will be at Dublin High tomorrow. Bright will appear in group tumbling and vaulting routines and in floor exercise, both solo and in duet with Dunbar.

Meanwhile, the only remaining stumbling block in the way of a rhythmic team for the Walnut Creek-based club is the lack of an experienced coach.

However, Gault has lined up a pair of possibilities.

The first is Hanna Christie of Marin County who has already expressed interest. Although she is not currently teaching, Christie will be in her native Czechoslovakia for awhile to attend a European-style gymnastics extravaganza.

The other possibility would be some sort of arrangement with Dale Flansaa of the Western Gymnastics Foundation of Reno. Flansaa is the coach for the United States Pan-American Games team and led her Reno team to the national modern rhythmic championship earlier this year.

Brokers play for nationals today

Allied Brokers, the Pleasanton Bobby Sox All-Star softball team, opens a tournament in Campbell this afternoon that could lead to a berth in the national championships next week at Buena Park.

Pleasanton is one of five teams to play at Castro Junior High School on Campbell Ave., beginning at 4 today. Two of the teams will be eliminated from the competition between then and Saturday.

The remaining three qualify for the national championships next week.

Pleasanton's chances appear strong after a 12-1 victory over Newark Wednesday in the district finals.

The Brokers exploded for 10 runs in the first two innings of the game, then coasted behind the pitching of Michelle Benson. She was relieved with one out in the seventh inning by Jayne Kuhns.

Benson allowed just two hits, and shut out Newark through the first six innings.

Newark contributed to its own demise with seven errors in the game Pleasanton committed just three.

Kuhns paced the Brokers' 14-hit attack with three base hits.

Hits by Kuhns, Carolyn Hill, Lisa Leach, Kathy Gephart and Benson accounted for seven Pleasanton runs in the second inning.

Three runs scored in the first inning on errors.

LUSD names new principal

LIVERMORE - A Portola School teacher has become the new principal of Fifth Street School.

Mary Everett, who served this year as acting principal at Portola when Principal Mary Giorgi was absent, will be taking over at Livermore's oldest elementary school. She replaces Dr. Don Hutcherson, who has asked for a teaching assignment.

Mrs. Everett was a sixth grade teacher at Portola last year and served her administrative internship there. She has eight years of experience teaching fourth and sixth grades and educationally handicapped children in the Livermore Unified School District. She also taught elementary grades in California and Washington before joining this district.

Mrs. Everett holds a bachelor's degree in social science from the University of Washington, Seattle, and a master's in education from California State University, Hayward. Her life credentials are: general elementary, standard supervision in administration and standard designated services - adult education.

She has worked on many school committees, including the district architect selection committee, educational council, budget committee, language arts curriculum, reading continuum and physical education continuum committees.

A Livermore resident, she has three children aged 20, 16 and 10.

Livermore can't stop development

LIVERMORE - Any legal clout the city might have had to prevent Alameda County from approving a commercial development along Portola Avenue expired last year, the city attorney has informed the city council.

Council members last month learned much to their ire that the county had approved a 24-hour convenience market at 1779 Portola Avenue.

The store added to city fears that Portola Avenue, an entrance point into Livermore, will become a commercial strip.

Part of Portola is within the city's jurisdiction; part, county jurisdiction.

The council had considered taking legal action against the county for permitting the store to locate on Portola Avenue.

However, according to City Attorney Bob Logan, such litigation had to be started within a certain time period — which expired in June 1974.

Logan added that litigation still is possible in regard to the Anderson property along Portola, where the county is considering a request to allow a commercial development. That decision is pending.

"We can challenge that (development) as inconsistent with the county's General Plan although the county would most likely solve their whole problem by amending the General Plan," Logan observed.

Grads seek lost 9 from class of '55

Livermore High School class of 1955 graduates Estelle Belanger, Diana Davison, Robert Farrar, Carol Gates, Ron Maher, Robert Duncan, Brian Pasley, Glenda Fox and Jim Grover — where are you?

Mary Lou Callaghan (Faulk) and Mary Keech (Butterfield) are looking for you to make your high school class 20-year reunion complete. Of the 100 graduates in your class, you nine are the only ones who can't be found.

Downtown restoration on agenda

LIVERMORE - Downtown beautification and restoration will be discussed at the beautification committee meeting scheduled for Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Carnegie Building, Fourth and L Streets.

Other projects and regular reports to be presented include railroad screening, fire hydrant painting and the proposed beautification of the southwest corner of Murrieta Boulevard and Portola Avenue.

Protestors to march on capital

Hundreds of demonstrators from throughout Alameda County will converge on Sacramento next Tuesday to protest the dire financial state of schools in California.

The 10 a.m. rally is sponsored by the recently formed ACT FUNDS (Action Committee to Fund United Needy District Schools), a coalition of teachers, administrators, board members and classified school employees, as well as interested parents, students and other community groups.

The group has asked Governor Edmund G. Brown, Jr. to talk with them in a meeting following the rally about the "extreme financial crisis facing Castro Valley Unified School district, which purports to share a problem common to many of the state's schools: the squeeze of inflation, declining enrollment and unrealistic funding limits set by SB 90.

They will urge the governor and local legislators to pass SB 220 when the legislature reconvenes next week. SB 220, originally introduced by Sen. Al Rodda (D-Sacramento) is an emergency school fund measure carrying a $115 million price tag this year.

It would help schools by increasing the amounts paid to districts for each attending student, thus partially easing the double squeeze of rising costs and declining enrollment.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Wilson Riles has been asked to attend the rally and meeting, as well as Alameda County legislators Floyd Mori, Bill Lockyer, Ken Meade and John Miller.

Assemblymen, and Senators Nicholas C. Petris and John W. Holmdahl.

Scheduled to speak at the rally are William Barton, California School Boards Association; LaVonne King, California Teachers Association; Gordon Winton, Associated California School Administrators, and Dennis Edwards, California School Employees Association.

The group is protesting the financial situation which forced Castro Valley Unified to cut custodial and library services, and increase class sizes. They also cite Berkeley Unified as an example, where employees were recently asked to accept a 15 per cent cut in pay this year in order to balance the budget.

Rally participants will be leaving from the Castro Valley High School parking lot at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday. All parents, students, board members and employee groups interested in education are urged to attend.

Advertised drugs and eye glasses

If there is any merit in this nation's advance in technological skill and resulting "life style" then considerable credit for that advance is due our system of free enterprise, with the attendant competitive spirit which has always spurred such ingenuity. Now there are moves afoot to bring that same competition to play in such sacrosanct areas as the practice of law, and the sales of prescription drugs and glasses.

For reasons still unclear, this nation has never been willing to allow the same free enterprise verve which controls most of what we consume or use, to be applied to those items and services which are most essential to our well-being. (One explanation might be that state legislative houses are dominated by members of the legal and medical professions.)

The Supreme Court has held that attorneys may no longer be sheltered by this umbrella of special privilege. An attorney has the right, and even the obligation, to make known his fees even as does the mechanic, the public utility and the plumber.

Now the struggle moves to those drugs and glasses that are sold by doctor's prescription. Precedent says that you take that little slip of paper (the writing on which you can never understand) to the nearby (often adjacent) dispensary; the man disappears into his back room, advising you to "come back later." You return, accept the wrapped merchandise, pay your bill, and depart. It is all very mysterious, all very kosher.

There was a time when funeral parlors operated in the same mystic world of priceless wonder. Now those who must deal with the departed are prepared to deal also with the living in a businesslike — but still professional — manner that makes death just a little less traumatic.

If we can be fed, housed, transported, clothed and buried in a spirit of open and honest enterprise, then why in the world can't standard medical services be set forth within the same guidelines?

Legislation that would do just that is now pending before the Assembly in Sacramento. Assemblyman Floyd Mori is a member of one of those committees. If you have an opinion — either for or against — you are urged to communicate those thoughts to Assemblyman Mori, or his local office, in time to help influence that legislation.

Protecting the Bay

The appointment of Joseph C. Houghteling as chairman of the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission brings to that post an unusual public servant who promises to put a little spunk into an agency that too long has been hiding in the mud flats. It also means that BCDC will have a chairman who is well acquainted with this valley, as he is with the balance of the Bay's suburbs.

Houghteling has a background as chairman of the California Parks Commission and member of the California Highway Commission, a fact he shook up by suggesting that "the inmates are in charge of the asylum." That kind of candor is needed in a great many state agencies.

Our own view of Joe Houghteling is admittedly colored by his past association with the Pleasanton Times. But that relationship only served to increase our respect for the man's total honesty in all things, governmental or commercial.

We stop short of claiming we now have "a friend in court" for any future BCDC deliberations, but it is nice to know that a panel charged with guarding the Bay is to be chaired by a man from Alhambra, claiming a working relationship with such familiars as Los Gatos, Sunnyvale and Pleasanton. We hope Mr. Houghteling never loses sight of those hinterland values as he deals with great metropolitan forces in their persistent push to fill in San Francisco Bay.

Psychological services defended

Editor, The Times:

I am generally pleased to see the article about the need for psychological services by Pat Kennedy on page one of the Times (7-27-75). I believe there is a need for 24-hour-a-day emergency psychological services in this area. However, I think Mr. Kennedy may have been inadvertently harsh with two groups of people who are now the principal providers of such services. I'm speaking of the police and the primary physicians.

In describing groups of people who could profit from emergency psychological care she said, "Then there are the violent ones who end up in a police cell when they really should be in a doctor's office." It is my impression that the local police forces are quite sensitive to the needs of psychologically disturbed persons. If one of these people ends up in a jail cell, it is probably because they have assaulted a police officer and the officer is required by law to arrest him. The police, I'm sure, would be quite willing to allow a mental health professional in a plain car and without a uniform, to interview such a person and suggest sources of help. It has been the lack of such a 24-hour service which has led to a frightened, angry or disturbed person being arrested.

The other misleading statement from Mr. Kennedy's article was, "Private physicians sometimes put their patients, heavily tranquilized into VMH..." It would be more accurate to say, "Private physicians sometimes admit their patients with emotional problems to VMH, often the physician must rely on the use of medication because mental health services are either unavailable or only remotely available."

Surprisingly there is a wide variety of mental health help available in the tri-valley area. This ranges from the nearly 20 licensed private psychotherapists and counselors to the American Red Cross, the Alameda County mental health outpatient clinic in Pleasanton and others. The difficulty lies in the fact that these services are poorly organized to provide emergency care. It is my hope that the establishment of an emergency psychological service at Valley Memorial Hospital would provide a nucleus around which other mental health services can be organized.

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

My old friend George Foreman is back in town and I have not driven across the valley to see him.

A man can get involved in this business. What with Frank Ivadi, George Spiliotopoulos, the Oakland Raiders and a slightly exploded Volkswagen, I have, to put it mildly, been busy.

Like John Edmonds, my immediate superior, I prefer working on a good story to any other phase of this business and when one comes along I can't turn it down.

That can keep a man busy when he is faced with all the technical aspects of editing a newspaper as his full time job, plus the writing of a three times a week column on the side.

Hopefully, also, a few editorials although I would wager my somewhat critical friend, Helen Tirschell, would be perfectly happy if I overlooked that little chore for all time.

She does not know it, but she is a lucky lady. I get ideas for editorials about the time I hit the sack in the wee hours and forget them when dawn comes and it is time to walk little Black Max.

Maybe I should make notes in the darkness. A man feels pretty ornery about midnight after a tough day over a hot typewriter.

I will get over to see George, however. There is a chance I may have a little proposition for him. One which Dick Saddler turned down in no uncertain terms. But a man can hope, can't he? It burns eternal in the heart of this old man.

George has been a source of worry to me over the last couple of years. I hated to see him lose to Cassius Clay in Zaire and did not enjoy that slightly clownish spectacle when he fought the five men on the same night in Canada.

The George Foreman I met in a ground floor apartment of the Executive Arms was one of the nicest young men I ever knew.

We sat in the only two chairs in that one room dwelling and George played selections from Mary Poppins in a tape cassette while he told me the story of his life in the dingy and bloody Fifth Ward in Houston.

I don't know what I was prepared for when I went to interview George for Man's Magazine in the days before it passed out of the hands of my old friend and editor, Phil Hirsch.

Certainly not what I found.

The huge young man sitting on the other side of the room and complaining now and then that he could not get fighters to meet him who retained their conscious-

FOCUS/Teenagers

The silent majority

Has "hanging out" become the national sport of teenagers?

Do the kids who slink around the liquor store parking lots, sit on car hoods or roar up and down First Street in Livermore and Main in Pleasanton represent the majority?

I don't think so. Like so many other things, it's how visible something is that determines the amount of reaction from townspeople and media.

From time to time, usually after a walk up Main or First or a jaunt around "downtown" Dublin (there IS such a place!), I have become so disillusioned with what I've seen and heard that I've found myself on the verge of putting ALL teenagers in the same category... foul-mouthed delinquents with nothing better to do than litter the public streets with joints, butts, beer cans and obscenities.

Fortunately, I get a chance to observe and talk with young people who prove that the above noted juveniles are still in the minority.

A year ago this month two young teen girls accomplished a sports record of sorts that, if not amazing or earth-shaking, at least points up the directions that the teenage mind moves. If Jamie Pappas and Karie Theis, both 15, are emblematic of teenagers in this valley... and I believe they are... then we have nothing to worry about as regards "that young generation."

Perhaps what we really need to do is listen to them more.

While I don't think that being a teen today is any more difficult than 20 or 30 years ago, I do believe that today's young people have very special problems that deserve attention from the community at large.

Like things to do... both recreational and jobs.

Karie and Jamie, soon to be sophomores at Amador Valley High, find that "hanging out" is not really their cup of tea. They'd much rather take part in some sports or recreational event, go to a dance at the youth center, to a non-sponsored excursion to Santa Cruz or rock concert at the Oakland Coliseum or shopping in San Francisco or Southland-the-way.

Much of this costs money, though.

And that points up another problem encountered by today's 14, 15 and 16-year olds...some sort of a part-time or full-time job.

Jamie is fortunate in that her mother, Mrs. John (Jan) Pappas, owns the Kid-dy Cade at the Amador Shopping Center and gives her a chance to work there on occasions. Most teens are not that fortunate.

Outside of babysitting or yard work, their is precious little open to those in their early and mid-teens.

This is an area that a city-related committee should explore in depth between now and next summer.

We find, in talking with Jamie and Karie as well as many other teens in this valley, that "hanging out" and "partying" is often the recourse when there's "nothing to do."

Unless you're on an all-star sports team (Jamie plays for the Pleasanton Bobcats All-Stars) or "into" some other recreation offering, there's not a great deal to do sports-wise in this valley during the summer...at least of an organized fashion.

The girls note that "unless you belong to a club, it's difficult to find a place to swim or play tennis." They also mention other sports such as softball, volleyball and track & field.

The opportunities for participation during the summer are limited, unless one forms his own team, sets up nets and standards an intrigues some friends into participating. In short, they believe that more organized events could be offered.

All the way from sports leagues to dances and concerts.

A name rock group at the Fairgrounds?

When this was suggested to the girls, they all but jumped up and cheered. There's little doubt that rock concerts, especially with "name" groups, whether at Robertson Park, Amador Community Park or (as it possibly) the Fairgrounds Amphitheatre, would draw valley kids by the thousands.

What we really must do is make an honest attempt to listen to our teenagers...the real silent majority...not the loud minority out on the streets.

You'll be surprised, and encouraged, by what you'll learn by sitting down and talking one-on-one with them.

Letters to the Times

Equal rights

Editor, The Times:

The Federal Equal Rights Amendment is the most devastating piece of legislation ever to be considered by our congress. It's tentative passage is the cause of so much liberalized legislation being passed to the American people.

The proponents have no concern for the American people as individuals with rights. With the stroke of the pen our legislatures are wiping out by law family obligation, structure and separation of sex.

The amendment is a tool being used to get everything some self-centered, disilluminated, power hungry radicals want without thought as to what is best for the American people.

The American people are at fault for allowing this to happen and not finding out for themselves what the facts are. The facts are recorded by authorities who are congressional constitutional attorneys, who are on record as the "intent and implications" of the F.E.R.A. Do Not Be Deceived by the proponents, to believe that the authorities are the clubs, organizations and leagues quoted by them. Again the facts are speaking louder than words by these state laws being changed to align with the F.E.R.A.

The United States is being depleted economically, morally, and financially...

A nation that kills unborn babies legally, recognizes all phases of sex deviates legally, abolishes sexual distinction among our young by removing the terms of distinction of sex from school books (a mere brainwashing) by federal ruling, creates unrest among it's people by unwanted legislative actions, that invades the peoples rights, can no longer be as stated in the pledge of allegiance "One nation under God with Liberty and Justice For All."

City planners

Bill Cauble's story on July 23 about the council and the city planners attacking the Grunwald, Crawford and Associates transportation report brings up many questions, and I am probably not the only one who would be interested in the answers.

1 — Why do Livermore city officials continually renege consultants at high fees and then disregard their professional advice? 2 — When the Southern Pacific started on its hazardous journey to track relocation and overpass construction, why didn't the Livermore city officials publicize the Environmental Impact Report on this construction? 3 — When the new downtown project was being planned, why didn't the Livermore city officials bring forth their Air Quality and Land Use Elements for inclusion in the "plan"?

4 — Why didn't the city officials present the consultants with the planning criteria BEFOREHAND so that the consultants could give their professional opinion based on what could be used in their report?

5 — Why didn't the planners include a noise evaluation and impact report on the project of the SP which will put two railroad tracks parallel? 6 Your report on the attack was excellent.

Found the town

Over the years my journalistic prowlings have taken me before Kings (the King family used to live in Happy Valley) and heads of state (Governor Pat Brown took off his shoes and put his stinking feet on the desk), but nothing, absolutely nothing I have set down on paper ever gained the response earned by that single comment on my trouble with socks.

Folks we scarcely knew (and some I'd just as soon forget) have responded to the lament of the mismatched socks with a passion reserved only for taxes, or sex. I hasten to note that I am no authority on those latter two, but on socks I am fast becoming the best-informed citizen in two counties, thanks to a lot of concerned people.

"Pin the socks together with safety pins as soon as they are washed," advises Mrs. Ben York. "That's the way I raised my family, and we never wound up with a single unmatched pair." She even offered to buy me some safety pins, and was last seen headed down the street in search of same.

Portia Wade made her spouse cease his duties at the store while the two of them pondered my sock-like troubles. "I figured this was more important, since we've been having the same difficulty for years," Portia advises. They were disappointed, however, to discover that my commentary just recited the problem, without offering any answers.

The handsome young advertising agency man who sat himself down in front of my desk was all business, but the first item he wished to dispense with was "the problem with your feet." It took me a few moments to figure out what he was talking about.

Not so with the gent, whose name shall be withheld for obvious reasons, who reported to me thusly: "That idiot wife of mine has never been able to match one sock with the other. It can't be that difficult... although I must confess I never tried it myself."

Perhaps the keenest observation came from the four-year-old next door. He caught me in a reclined state on the couch, whilst reading the evening paper. My feet were shoeless, but not sockless, except for the usual evidence of large holes therein. "Are those your broken toes?", he asked. At least HE seemed genuinely concerned.

The entire drama has not been wasted. There emerges such widespread community concern over socks, unmatched and even unwanted, that I propose to establish a "Sock Swap" for the valley. You bring your mismatches, I'll bring mine, and together we should amass the world's greatest assortment of foot covers. The possibilities are endless.

Neighbor would get to meet neighbor, over something a little less traumatic than the height of his fence, or the chickens on their side of same. In some instances we might even bring husband and wife back together again. Failing that, we could at least provide the opportunity for a new mingling of the sexes, suburban style.

"Oh, aren't you Henry Thoreau? ... the one whose wife left him for the god pot?"

My, those are certainly lovely unmatched socks you are carrying. Perhaps the two of us could retire to my place in search of a better pair. My husband left me for the lady CHP officer, as you may have heard...

Picture the scene with the well-known member of the Livermore city council meeting his Pleasanton counterpart at the First Annual Valley Sock Swap.

"Well hi there Don, you environmental son of a gun. I see you have socks to match your ideas... full of holes. Heh, heh, heh."

"Yes Ed, but at least my socks don't reach clear up over my head, blinding me from any and all new ideas."

"That's pretty good Don, heh, heh, heh, but let's not start feuding again. Besides, neither of us has a quorum, or even an audience. No sense in wasting all these good jobs."

"Right Ed, and I was just about to ask you if that rock-ribbed blue sock you are carrying is available for swap. That's Lake Tahoe blue, isn't it?"

"No Don, it's more of a conservative indigo. Wore them to the last freeway opening, but some idiot spilled asphalt over my right foot. Wound up with one good sock. You interested in swapping my blue for that burgundy stretch number you have in your hand?"

"You bet, Ed, but it's not burgundy. More of a liberal red. Got it at a Rad Lab fire sale. All they had was one."

"It seems to me, Don, that we have a lot of socks in common. It's just a matter of semantics... getting you to see the colors my way, heh, heh, heh."

"Harumph," said Don, harumphing, "I must admit that for the first time I feel I know where you stand. What say we slip away for a tall cool one?"

"Sure thing, Don, your sewer plant or mine?"

And thus it is written that the valley found peace at last, and all because our leader learned to sock it to 'em.

—by John Edmonds

He had confidence in keeping with his ability then, quiet belief in his ability to rise to the peak of his profession, given time and the opportunity.

I asked him when he thought he would be ready for Clay and he said he needed a couple of years. (I'd call Clay Mohammad whatever it is, but hell, I can't spell it.) Four years later we met at the Pleasanton and George remembered me mostly because Hirsch, in a fit of enthusiasm had put a slightly unreal head on the story. "George Foreman, next heavyweight champion of the world." That headline had made me a prophet, although without honor. I had made no such prediction in the story.

But George did remember and when I reminded him he had mentioned needing two more years and four had passed, he replied with a grin, "I think HE needs those two years," he told me.

George was right, or apparently so at the time, because he laid the former champion low so fast when they finally met some of the fans never reached their seats.

A lot of things have happened to George since then. Some good, mostly bad. I had wondered if that unspoiled lad I met in Hayward, living in an apartment squeezed between the California department of Employment and the Hayward Daily Review, would stay unspoiled.

Now I wonder if he has, if he will survive the wealth and fame and wealth which eventually became his.

I hope so with my heart and soul. Because the George Foreman I met a few weeks after his 21st birthday was one hell of a nice fellow. A lot better man than the one who started life decently christened Cassius Clay.

Twelve other youngsters received awards.

The books will be on display at the library through the month of August.

Agency on Aging sets five hearings

To insure the fullest possible participation from senior citizens who will be affected, the Alameda County Agency on Aging has scheduled five hearings throughout the county.

The agency is responsible for coordinating all service programs for older adults and is in the process of formulating a plan for the county.

The plan will reflect the needs and priorities for senior citizens and much of it will be based on the comments made by senior citizens and other interested persons at the five hearings.

Following those hearings, which are not required by law, the agency will finalize a plan and then hold another series of public hearings before presenting the plan to the board of supervisors for adoption.

One of the five hearings will be held in Pleasanton at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 13, at the Veterans Memorial Building.

The other hearings are scheduled for Fremont on Aug. 6, Hayward on Aug. 7, Oakland on Aug. 14 and Berkeley on Aug. 18.

For further information concerning the hearings, contact Program Supervisor Vancy Bulluck at 846-3277, extension 7002.

Health Care Center advisory board has new members

SAN RAMON - Three new members have recently been appointed to the advisory board of the Family Health Care Center.

They are Donald J. Williams, superintendent of the Murray school district; Captain James M. Morton of the Valley Community Services Fire Department; and Dr. Thomas R. White, a Dublin orthodontist.

The board advises the center on additional health services, hours of operation and budgeting. It is composed of residents, business people and health professionals of the Dublin-San Ramon area.

Other members of the board are chairman Ron Hyde; vice chairman Phillip Flores; Mary Gehrke, Maxine Spruiell, Roberta Gail Starsiak and Dr. Floyd P. Naugle.

The Family Health Care Center opened in February, 1974, to help ease a shortage of doctors in the West Valley. It is operated by Valley Memorial Hospital.

So, what's new?

Eleven new babies arrived in the Valley recently, including:

At Eden Hospital, Castro Valley, a boy July 7 to Mr. and Mrs. William Romell, 476 Colusa Way, Livermore; and a girl July 14 to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Santucci, 46 Alton Place, San Ramon.

don, 327 Main St., Pleasanton.

July 24: a girl to Roger and Sherry Hoffman, 286 Calis Drive, San Ramon.

July 25: a girl to Anthony and Linda DiThomas, 1220 Diamond Court, Livermore.

Pleasanton enjoys big building month

PLEASANTON - The biggest month in new home construction in four years was reported by the city building department which processed 205 single family home permits in June.

A one-month surge of sewer connections both within the city-owned plant on Sunol Boulevard and the system operated by Valley Community Services District made possible the construction boom.

"We expect to process a similar number of housing permits in July, and then that will be until a new allocation of sewer connections comes through," explained a spokesperson for the building inspection department.

Not since August of 1971 has Pleasanton issued anything like 200 single family home permits in one month. Last year the city was able to approve just eleven new home starts, and the total for the last three years was under 1000 starts.

This year to date, including the July surge, the permits have totalled 297. There have been no new "multiple residential" starts in the city since 1973.

Home alterations and additions continued to show a brisk pace in June, with 37 total in that category, and permits were issued for 25 more backyard pools. There was one commercial building start in June, bringing to three the total in that designation for the year.

CITY OF PLEASANTON
NOTICE OF INTENT TO
FILE A NEGATIVE
DECLARATION
PROJECT DESIGNATION: RZ-75-10
July 29, 1975

In accordance with the provisions set forth in Resolution No. 74-133 and as amended in Resolution No. 75-22 (Environmental Impact Guidelines and Procedures), rezoning application RZ-75-10, an amendment to permit picture frame shops as a permitted use in the C-3 (Commercial Service) District, has been determined to require a negative declaration.

The project consists of amending Section 2-7.08a of Chapter 2, Title II of the Pleasanton Zoning Ordinance to include picture frame shops as a permitted use in C-3 (Commercial Service) District.

The operation of a picture frame shop in this district would not affect traffic, noise, or any other environmentally sensitive parameter more than those uses allowed in the C-3 District. It is the finding of the Director of Housing and Community Development that this amendment would not create, to a significant degree, any of the effects enumerated in the Environmental Impact Guidelines and Procedures which indicate that the environment may be harmed.

For more information on this case, contact the Department of Housing and Community Development, 200 Bernal Avenue, Pleasanton, California 94566, telephone 846-3202.

Unless any written appeals of this case are received by this department within ten (10) days of the above date or publication of this notice in the Pleasanton Times, whichever is later, this decision will become effective.

CITY OF PLEASANTON
NOTICE OF INTENT TO
FILE A NEGATIVE
DECLARATION PROJECT
DESIGNATION: UP-75-19
July 29, 1975

In accordance with the provisions set forth in Resolution No. 74-133 and amended in Resolution No. 75-22 (Environmental Impact Guidelines and Procedures), conditional use permit application UP-75-19, an application to operate a nursery school in an A (Agricultural) District, has been determined to require a negative declaration.

The project consists of operating a Montessori school for approximately 20 children aged 3 to 6 years in a residence located at 417 Sycamore Road. In conjunction with this use the 1.5 acre site would be fenced, the existing driveway would be enlarged and parking spaces provided, rustic outdoor play equipment would be installed and possibly animals would be kept on the site.

This use in what is a rural residential area would increase traffic on Sycamore Road as parents deliver and pick up their children. The children would also contribute some noise as they may be outside one hour of the three hour school day. Surrounding residences, however, are not close to the proposed play area, which would be screened by existing trees and a new 6 foot fence. Although groundcover in the area has been contaminated by septic tank leaching systems, the increased load upon the present septic tank system was not seen to be a problem by the Alameda County Health Department in this instance. It is the finding of the Director of Housing and Community Development that this project would not create, to a significant degree, any of the effects enumerated in the Environmental Impact Guidelines and Procedures which indicate that the environment may be harmed.

For more information on this case, contact the Department of Housing and Community Development, 200 Bernal Avenue, Pleasanton, California 94566, telephone 846-3202.

Unless any written appeals of this case are received by this department within ten (10) days of the above date or publication of this notice in the Pleasanton Times, whichever is later, this decision will become effective.

NOTICE OF INTENT TO FILE
A NEGATIVE DECLARATION PROJECT DESIGNATION:
RZ-75-9
July 29, 1975

In accordance with the provisions set forth in Resolution No. 74-133 and as amended in Resolution No. 75-22 (Environmental Impact Guidelines and Procedures), rezoning application RZ-75-9 has been determined to require a negative declaration.

The project consists of rezoning the site of the existing Shell Service Station on the southeast corner of First Street and Vineyard Avenue from C-3 (Commercial Freeway) District to C-5 (Commercial Service) District and to rezone the lot immediately south of the service station from C-3 (Commercial Service) District to C-5 (Commercial Service) District. The rezoning of the service station parcel from R-1 (Multiple Residential) District to C-5 (Commercial Service) District would allow commercial use on approximately 0.75 acres.

Rezoning this land to C-5 District would allow commercial use, in addition to the limited uses allowed in the C-3 District. By including the adjacent residential area, the present service station would be able to provide services necessary to a service station, but prohibited in the C-3 District. First Street is a major thoroughfare presently, and the westerly side of the street is zoned for commercial use. In this setting, the rezoning of this small area would not have significant environmental effects. It is the finding of the Director of Housing and Community Development that this rezoning would not create, to a significant degree, any of the effects enumerated in the Environmental Impact Guidelines and Procedures which indicate that the environment may be harmed.

For more information on this case, contact the Department of Housing and Community Development, 200 Bernal Avenue, Pleasanton, California 94566, telephone 846-3202.

Unless any written appeals of this case are received by this department within ten (10) days of the above date or publication of this notice in the Pleasanton Times, whichever is later, this decision will become effective.
